Sustainable and Socially Connected Design

Eco designer and cultural creative, Wendy has 25 years of practical experience as director, partner, consultant, strategist and connector. Her placemaking includes map making, workshops, and engaging experiences, often in partnership with local Green Map projects, museums and universities. She's also involved in resiliency projects designed to help NYC address urgent climate challenges.

Local: Green Map NYC

Originator and Producer of Green Map NYC, which charts NYC's environmentally significant places and projects. First published in 1992, followed by multiple city-wide editions, in print and as interactive Open Green Maps. Theme maps include the 2006 'Powerful' edition on energy and climate change, an ongoing engagement project; waste reduction, youth views, cycling and more. As seen at GreenMapNYC.org, Wendy has produced award-winning public events including tours, workshops and exhibitions; consulted and taught. The NYC Green Map project inspired the global Green Map System, and continues to offer inspiring models.

Global: Green Map System

Founder and Director. Launched in 1995, this pioneering nonprofit has engaged nearly 1,000 communities in 65 countries in charting new directions to a sustainable future. Promoting community sustainability, citizen participation and local leadership, Wendy is actively involved in creative, organizational and website development, including the Open Green Map social mapping platform (used by 40 countries), related books, exhibitions, trainings, etc. To date, 550 unique print Green Maps have been published, and 450 interactive Green Maps are online, all using collaboratively designed Green Map Icons, adaptable mapmaking processes, tools and infrastructure. GreenMap.org shares stories that amplify the skills, networks and knowledge generated through mapmaking to foster more engagement and well-being, locally and globally.
